

RAISED SCHOOL TAX AT ELECTION SATURDAY

By a 5 to 1 majority, taxpayers of the Gatter school district in Frankfort township voted last Saturday afternoon 30 to 6, to increase the school tax rates for their district so that the school might continue in operation.

The propositions approved, call for the educational tax levy to be increased from $1 to $1.50 per hundred, and for an increase from 37½ cents to 50 cents per hundred in the building fund levy. The figures are based on the assessment schedule of previous years.

Under the new schedule as provided by the 100 percent assessment law, effective January 1, 1946, the rates would be increased from 50 cents to 75 cents per $100 for the educational fund and from 18.75 cents to 25 cents per $100.

The school is to continue operations for the term opening this week thru the issuance of tax anticipation warrants by the school district trustees, Albert H. Krusemark, Jr., attorney for the school district said.

Most of the school population in the district, 156A, is drawn from the Lincoln Estates in Frankfort township.

Fake G I Solicitors

A warning is being sounded that persons representing themselves to be G. I.'s are soliciting subscriptions to magazines, to earn money to send them to college. Veterans organizations would like it to be known that the Government is taking care of the G. I.'s and are also sending those to college who care to go. It is suspected that those who are doing this soliciting are not G. I.'s and are not worthy of support.

Government Tampering Cuts Food Supply

Many food processors over the nation are not getting the raw materials necessary to keep operating. A Pennsylvania company laid off 125 employees recently because of the flour shortage and inability to secure cooking oil. A Texas processor, who packs meatballs and spaghetti, tamales and chile con carne closed his canning department because he couldn't get meat. Another maker of prepared puddings and pie crust located in New York reports that a lack of cornstarch has cut production. A nationally-known maker of malted milk powder suspended operations because of the lack of flour. A well known manufacturer of children's deserts is crippled because of the sugar shortage. These conditions exist all thru the food industry preventing it from serving the nation at full capacity.

Paul S. Willis, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, states that: "The government has been and currently is, the self-appointed manager of the nation's food basket, and the government cannot escape responsibility for the current situation. Government manipulation, tampering with sound business economics, and its failure to plan ahead intelligently have all contributed to this situation."

What Mr. Willis says concerns us all because when the bread basket of America is empty, people don't eat. Retail

STOPS BUSES FOR DRINKS

No longer will passengers on busses passing Sparrow's Cocktail Lounge in Harvey be invited off the bus for "drinks on the house." That is, if Edw. Wroblewski, heads the order of Circuit Judge John Prystalski, issued recently.

Wroblewski, whose name is synonymous with sparrow, is currently being sued for divorce by his wife, Nettie of 14700 Page Avenue, Harvey.

Judge Prystalski told Wroblewski to leave John Barleycorn alone, to get a new job, and to hire a bartender to take his place in the tavern.

Mrs. Wroblewski's attorney Norman Becker, explained:

"We want him enjoined from entering the tavern because he is drinking up the profits of the business. He goes out and invites everybody in for free drinks on the house. He even stops busses that pass by and invites passengers in for free drinks."

"What are you complaining about," I pay for the drinks" cut in Wroblewski. "I only hit her when I'm drunk."

"It hurts just as much," reminded Judge Prystalski.

Sues For $1000 Damages To Car

In a $1,000 damage suit filed Saturday in circuit court by William Knipple of Frankfort, it is charged that Earl Smith 372 West Jefferson street, mechanic for a Joliet garage, was involved in an accident Sept. 13, 1945, while driving Knipple's automobile without the owners consent.

According to the complaint, which was filed against Smith and Ramon F. Fernandez, 122 Margaret street, the driver of the second car involved in the accident. Knipple delivered his automobile to the garage for repairs shortly before the accident. On Sept. 13, Smith took the car out and, while driving on Troy road, collided with a car owned and operated by Fernandez, according to the complaint. The accident occurred Knipple alleges, because both Smith and Fernandez were driving carelessly at the time.

Thru his attorneys, the Chicago law firm of McKinley and Price, Knipple is seeking the sum of $1,000 to cover the damages to his machine.

At the time of the accident, the sheriff's office reported that Fernandez pulled out of Margaret street in Joliet onto the Troy road in front of the car Smith was driving. Smith was taken to St. Joseph's hospital following the accident for treatment of minor injuries suffered in the crash. He told Sheriff Ralph Newkirk that he was testing the Knipple vehicle at the time.

The Mokena Village board met in regular session Tuesday evening. Among the various business transactions was the refusing of license to three tavern application for the village. The license of the three taverns in Mokena was raised $100, which is the limit of taverns to be allowed in the village.

Steps are being taken to hire a police man to guard the streets in the village against the many reckless youth drivers. So many complaints have been received by the Board members, that steps must be taken to correct this nuisance.

The Board also decided to put a new roof on the village hall and new doors at the fire engine room.

Building permits were given to Hugh Deadmore who is erecting a new home on Front street across from the News-Bulletin office, and to Harmon Shaw who will build a new home on the lot adjoining the Floyd Warning home on the west.

WHERE TO GO

SEPT. 7.—Dance, Saenger Hall, Tinley Park, sponsored by H. H. Schultz.

ADDRESS AT HONOR ROLL BY ATT. CHAS. ELDER

at the Solider's Honor Roll Center, Mokena Homecoming, August 23, 1946. Fellow Citizens:

Mr. Elmer Schoeneck, representing its workers and members, has asked me to speak a few words on behalf of the Mokena Civic Association which is promoting these occasions. With the history of its inception and development in which our departed friends, Robert Bechstein and Editor William Semmler had a large part, I have general knowledge.

While the Civic Association promotes the Homecomings, they do not belong to the Civic Association alone. They belong to all of the people and organizations of the community and the vicinity. They furnish an occasion for cooperation to all of the organizations and individuals and the opportunity for the people and organizations of this community and the neighborhood to meet together, enjoy the society of their old friends and acquaintances, and become better acquainted with each other.

It is particularly appropriate that at this time tribute should be paid to our soldiers of World War II and that recognition be given to the participating Veterans, and other, patriotic organizations.

We have been profoundly depressed, both individually and collectively, by the recent great tragedy growing out of an automobile collision, through which a number of Mokena young people were seriously injured and the majority have died, including among them Veterans with outstanding records of heroism in overseas service. The families, and the survivors, themselves very badly injured, have our deep sympathy. Yet undoubtedly the victims themselves would feel that the Homecoming, for which so much preparation has been made, should proceed.

This might not be true if the project were a selfish one. It is a part of a program for the welfare for the whole community. While the Civic Association has had for sometime an important project of its own for community welfare, it has none-the-less cooperated with all of the other organizations and during the war has contributed substantially, though inconspicuously, to the purchase of War Bonds, to the Red Cross and other organizations, and to the fund for sending packets to the boys in the service.

The unselfish cooperation of organizations and individuals in the work of the Homecoming is most notable. In addition to the continuous work of many public spirited persons during the period of the celebration, months of preparation by a few devoted individuals are required. Each year, also, certain members have advanced out of their own pockets and without any personal advantage, or expectation of such the necessary funds for preparation, running sometimes into hundreds of dollars apiece, and risked the chance of losing their contributions. It is gratifying that the results have thus far prevented their loss and enabled the Association to set aside a substantial amount for the contemplated project for community service in addition to contributing to worthy purposes of other local organizations.

The Mokena Civic Association has already earmarked a substantial sum towards the establishment of a community center and I have it on very reliable authority, that action in this direction at a very early date is contemplated. This will be a center to be made use of by all of the organizations and all of the people, and the project is one of great promise for community welfare. Appropriately it will be a Memorial to our Soldiers.

I have mentioned the devoted cooperation exhibited by the individuals and organizations of these occasions. The heroes of Iwa Jima, Tarawa, Okinawa, Saipan and other actions in the Pacific, the campaigns in Africa, Italy and those commencing with the invasion of Normandy, achieved their results only thru zealous cooperation. But in our Post-War world, and in this country and its communities, individual groups so zealously seek the furtherance of their own purposes, that they sometimes overlook the general welfare. They do not always mean to disregard the general welfare, but the effect is that they do, and that the people of less fortunate nations than ours come to consider us as divided and antagonistic among ourselves.

This should not be. I recall a novel which I read as a boy. Perhaps it was "The Three Musketeers" whose motto was "all for one and one for all." If the individual people and organizations of Mokena and its environs, and those of the other communities of our Country, follow out the thought of this motto and continue in general the cooperation for the public welfare which has been notably exhibited in connection with the Mokena Homecoming, we will be a united nation of free individual citizens, and wholesome example for the less fortunate people of other nations suffering the affects of conflicting pressure groups and resulting dictatorships.

Building Roads In New Subdivision

HIGH LAND FOR THE LUCKY . . . Enclosed in the dark sector in the center of this location map are the 7,527 acres to be awarded to veterans of World War II, through the reclamation bureau of the department of interior, on the Klamath project land near the Oregon-California border.

First Public Farm Lands Opened to War Veterans

By WNU Features

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—Marking the first opportunity for ex-G.I.s to realize the dream of a self-sufficient outdoor life for which they dreamed in their lonely wartime vigils from the shores of China to the banks of the Elbe, the first public farm lands to be opened to veterans of World War II for farming soon will be available in the 7,527-acre Tule Lake sector of the Klamath irrigation project in Northern California.

More than 15,000 veterans are expected to apply for the 86 farm units to be awarded this year. Located near the California-Oregon border at an elevation of 4,100 feet, the farm units comprise rich irrigated lands which are highly productive. Varying in size from 60.8 to 141.3 acres, the units have an average size of 87.5 acres. Most valuable land is found in the smaller units.

Post Regulations.

Qualifications for entrymen and an explanation of the method of selection to be followed in awarding the lands are contained in a public notice posted in the Klamath Falls, Ore., post office, according to an announcement by regional bureau of reclamation headquarters here.

Copies of the public notice and application forms are being mailed to all veterans requesting them. Veterans interested in the lands who have not contacted the bureau may secure full details by writing to the superintendent, bureau of reclamation, at Klamath Falls or to the regional director of the bureau at Sacramento.

Establish Deadline.

All applications returned to Klamath Falls by September 15 will be considered as having been filed simultaneously, it was announced. Because of the large number of applications expected, bureau officials report that it is doubtful if any lands will be left for consideration of applications received after that date.

The procedure to be followed in selecting the entrymen includes a local examining board, a public drawing and the right of disqualified applicants to appeal decisions of the board.

Qualifications for applicants, as set forth in bureau regulations, include citizenship, character, farm experience, minimum of $2,000 capital and physical condition permitting manual labor involved in farm operation. No minimum age is set but regulations require service of at least 90 days in the armed forces, together with an honorable discharge.

Good Children Cost Less, Survey Shows

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. — It costs less to keep a good child than a bad one, according to figures cited at the Central States parole conference in the Hoosier capital. Reports indicated Indianapolis pays 7 cents to keep a child out of trouble and 75 dollars to care for a child in trouble.

Main item in the city's program to keep children out of trouble is an athletic program in which 75,000 Indianapolis youngsters have participated thus far this year. Cost has been approximately 7 cents a child.

A delinquent child who is turned over to the juvenile aid division for care costs the taxpayers $75 to cover expense of administration, investigation and disposition.

Sailors Keep Test Imprint on Chest

HONOLULU, H. I. — Style trends in tattooing keep abreast of the times. With each new arrival of the "Operation Crossroads" fleet, local tattoo parlors are thronged with sailors seeking a full color reproduction of the atomic bomb cloud. Most of the sailors want the tattoo on the chest.

The aerial test is out in front so far but the underwater blast is catching up rapidly.

Not Publicity Stunt, Publicity Man Insists

KANSAS CITY, MO. — Hurt feelings, arising from persistent razzing of his friends, represented the most severe injury incurred by Richard S. Haggman, publicity director of the Kansas City chamber of commerce, when he walked through the glass panel of his office door. A piece of falling glass, which barely nicked his right hand, was the only other injury.

Haggman denied emphatically that the whole thing was a publicity stunt, explaining that he never closes the door and that he turned into his office without noticing that the wind had blown the door shut.

An office clerk, who was in Haggman's office cleaning up broken glass from another office door which had blown shut a few minutes before, shattering the glass, shook his head resignedly when the second pane crashed, and started cleaning up the mess.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Provisions of Terminal Pay

Veterans' Service bureau today contains the answers to countless inquiries which have come to our Washington office concerning provisions of the new terminal pay law for enlisted men, recently signed by the President. Official title to the act is the armed forces leave act of 1946, which, by the way, is the first major revision of armed forces leave policies in 70 years, since the basic law respecting army and navy officers' leaves dates from 1874, with an amendment in 1876.

Here's what the act does: Overall, it gives to about 15 million former army, navy, marine and coast guard members an estimated 2.7 billion dollars in cash and interest bearing five-year bonds.

Essentially the act gives officers and enlisted men and women of all services identical leave rights and limits the amount of leave which any individual may accrue to 60 days, instead of the maximum of 120 days for officers as heretofore.

Men still in active service who have accumulated from 61 to 120 days leave as of September 1, 1946, will be reimbursed in cash and bonds for the balance over 60 days, and on September 1 will have to their credit 60 days leave. As more leave time accrues to these persons, they must take their leave or lose credit for it.

All veterans who already have left the service will be paid in cash and bonds for accumulated leave not taken up to 120 days between September 8, 1939, and September 1, 1946. The treasury, the army and the navy have outlined the following steps to be taken by veterans in applying for their payments:

1. Obtain from any post office in the country a form entitled, "Claim for Settlement Unused Leave" and the instruction sheet which goes with it.
2. Fill out this form, following the instruction sheet. If assistance is desired it may be obtained at any of the 3,000-odd veterans' community information or advisory centers throughout the nation, or at the office of any state or county veterans' service officer.
3. Swear to or affirm the statements made in the form before a notary public or other civil officer authorized to administer oaths. The majority of the community information or advisory centers will provide this notarial service free of charge.
4. Mail the completed form, together with your discharge certificate, or certification of service for each period of service covered in the claim, to the appropriate army, navy, marine corps or coast guard paying officer listed on the reverse side of the claim form. Your discharge certificate may be the original, a photostatic copy, or a certified copy. If the original discharge certificate has been lost or destroyed, a certificate in lieu of discharge, which will be considered as valid evidence for payment, will be issued on application to the appropriate one of the following agencies: For army—the Adjutant General's office, 4300 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo.; for navy—Chief of Naval Personnel, Navy department, Washington 25, D. C.; for marine corps—Headquarters U. S. Marine Corps, Washington, 25, D. C.; for coast guard—Commandant of the Coast Guard, Washington 25, D. C.

In case of veterans from the army, a form for which to apply for a certificate may be obtained at any recruiting office. It is a good idea to have at least one photostatic copy of your original discharge certificate made for your own files.

5. Upon receipt of the claim and supporting papers, the paying officer will examine all documents to make certain they are in proper form for payment, and after the supporting papers, the paying officer's purpose, they will be mailed back to you. Payment will be made as soon as possible, possibly by October 1. But do not write or call in person to paying officers inquiring about your claim. It will only delay speedy settlement of claims.

6. If the amount of the claim is less than $50, or if the claimant was last separated from active service before January 1, 1943, payment will be made in full by treasury check. For claims over $50 payment will be in bonds in multiples of $25, with a check for the balance. For instance, if the leave claim is for $219, the veteran will get $200 in $25 bonds and a check for $19. In cases where veterans have died, or in cases where they have been adjudged incompetent, payment will be made fully by check to survivors.

DREW PEARSON

RUSSIA'S BIG MISTAKE

WASHINGTON. — If the Soviet government had deliberately set out to make mistakes it couldn't have made more than it has piled up in the past year. In the one year that has passed since V-J Day, Russia has won the ill will of her neighboring countries in Europe, has lost virtually all her friends in the United States and has turned most of the world against her.

In considering our present strained relations with Russia, this is all-important. It indicates that time is running on our side, that Russia's own policies are playing into our hands, and that war can be avoided.

One year ago Soviet Russia was considered the great savior of the world. In Europe, the Russians were given credit, far more than the United States, for liberating the occupied countries, were even hailed by some as the pioneers of a new world order. In the U. S., most Americans had a genuine admiration for the heroism of the Russian people and looked forward to a period of friendly co-operation.

Today that good will has vanished. In all of Russia's satellites, with the possible exception of Finland and Czechoslovakia, the Soviet is extremely unpopular, even hated. Romania and Bulgaria would bolt Russia in a minute were it not for the Red army. Hungary and Austria, which Russia hoped to win over, voted overwhelmingly against the Soviet. In France the strong Communist upsurge now has hit the downgrade. Even in Yugoslavia, where Tito is supposed to be supreme, the Russians are not popular.

Most interesting fact is that the countries nearest the Russians usually dislike them most. Thus in more distant France, there is more pro-Soviet sentiment than in the adjacent Balkans.

Finally, in the American-British zones of Germany, Germans are fearful lest the western allies eventually evacuate and Russia walks in.

U. S. STOCK GOES UP

Thus the world has turned against an aggressor nation. Thus also, the world has turned toward a nation which has no selfish axes to grind and which is attempting to co-operate with the rest of the world.

This is what Secretary of State Byrnes has sincerely tried to do at Paris; and as far as this observer could ascertain, his patient, fair-minded policy is paying dividends. Part of the world, once ready to sing Russia's praises, has veered toward the United States.

Therefore, the No. 1 point of American policy should be to work things out within the family of nations; to put Palestine and other controversial problems under the United Nations; not to let the British drag us into separate alliances. This is our greatest danger. If we become the tail on the British kite, we can be eched into war with Russia — exactly where the British foreign office imperialists want us. But as long as the smaller independent nations of the world are convinced of our unselfish motives, as long as we remain aloof from both sides, our strength as a world leader is secure.

TENSION INCREASES

However, this alone may not head off war with Russia. As this is written, censored diplomatic dispatches from the Far East report three days of rifle skirmishing between American and Russian troops along the Korean border. This is the first time U. S.-USSR troops have deliberately fired at each other. Another censored dispatch from London reports the British general staff meeting daily to plan strategy for defending the British lifeline in the Near East.

In other words, certain belligerent elements in Russia are quite willing to risk war now; and certain elements in England believe a showdown is better now than later. In a charged atmosphere like this, one spark can cause tragedy.

However, this observer's experience in watching foreign affairs convinces him that seldom does any nation provoke an incident if it knows that incident means war; thus the best way to prevent war is to let a prospective belligerent know he will get it in the neck if he sticks his neck out.

In other words, if Russia knows categorically and definitely that she will be at war with us if she becomes an aggressor against the United Nations, then the chances are 100 to 1 Russia will risk no war.

COULD HAVE STOPPED HITLER

To illustrate: If Adolf Hitler had known he would have been at war with France and England when he sent his troops into the Ruhr and Rhineland he never would have given them marching orders. As it was, fearing war, he gave them two sets of orders, one to advance and the second to retreat if the French resisted. Likewise, Hitler never would have sent his troops into Austria if he hadn't known the Allies were unprepared. He was right as later events proved.

of a room that was furnished with next to nothing proves that.

The chair frame was made from odds and ends of lumber—no piece longer than 2½ feet. The shelf and matching cornice also were made of scrap lumber. The curtains and chair cushion are of an inexpensive cotton print.

This chair is made with pattern 265; and the scallops with No. 207. The curtain idea is from the booklet Make Your Own Curtains. Booklet and patterns are 15 cents each postpaid. Please mail requests for booklet and patterns direct to:

ATHLETE'S FOOT NEWS

"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT

after only 10-day treatment with

SORETONE

Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined in two ways: 1. Scrapings were taken from the feet and examined by the bacteriologist. 2. Each subject was examined by a physician. We quote from the report:

"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."

Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:

"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."

So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize with this nasty, devilish, stubborn infection. Get SORETONE! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

You'll probably want every one of these appliances in the new home you are building ...but, unless you plan now for adequate wiring, you won't be able to enjoy them!

The best time to get adequate wiring is during the period of construction. That's why it is important to check with your contractor to be sure the wiring plans for your new home are adequate before you start to build. When you get adequate wiring you avoid unsightly extension cords, dimming lights, and "loafing" appliances.

With adequate wiring you'll have circuits enough to supply abundant electricity for all your present appliances as well as for those soon coming your way. And, you'll have plenty of convenience outlets where you can "plug them in."

Be sure to plan now to have adequate wiring in your new home. Our Home Building representative will be glad to help you plan so you will have adequate wiring in your home, or you can consult your electric contractor.

Rufe's Ramblings

We had orders not to couple onto a coach which was standing at the depot in Windy Mountain one Sunday morning way back yonder so when we backed the down train in the conductor made certain that the tall hose didn't get mashed between the bumpers. After everybody boarded I stood and listened to them an I don't believe I ever hear a group more in the mood for singing.

Just before leaving time I sez to the conductor, "Joe" if thar' ain't some in thar' what dont belong then I'm not a passenger brakeman." So he went in to look 'em over and soon as he entered the door one old lady asked, "How long is this going to keep up?" He reckoned it would be an hour or more but he would gladly take her baggage and put her in another car.

In speaking of the incident later he sez to me, "If we'd left her in thar' where the folks were singing her face showed that it would have been just one more disappointment, but the one who would really have felt let down was the fellow who was self appointed master of ceremonies. He was a having such a good time standing up in the aisle waving his arms like a symphony conductor that I hated to tell him to change cars, but he thanked me and said he wouldn't have gone in thar' in the first place if he had noticed the funny looking wheels under that coach. I explained that they were thar' because they rolled better along a wagon road and that if he wanted to mingle with that same congregation next Sunday that he would have to go way up to the foot of the Blue Ridges cause the railroad had donated that old coach to the church."

Addition Being Added To Palos Telephone Building

Work is now in progress on the addition to the south side of the Palos Park telephone building, Mr. J. N. Westcott, manager for the Illinois Bell Telephone Company here, announced today. Primarily, the addition will house new central office equipment necessary to serve present and future needs in Palos Park. It will also provide space for a business office where Palos Park subscribers can transact telephone business and pay their bills. Constructed of brick, the new building will have concrete floors and plaster finish interior walls.

Mr. Westcott stated that, "Providing present schedules are met, the building will be finished in early Fall and additional central office equipment will be installed a few months thereafter. This is part of the Illinois Bell's vast 3 year, $160,000,000 post war expansion program to catch up and improve. The program also includes such new developments as faster long distance service; telephone service to and from moving vehicles; participation in a network of coaxial cable which will provide channels for television and additional telephone circuits and more and better service for rural subscribers. Most of the money for this huge undertaking must be obtained from people who are willing to invest their savings in the telephone business.

"Lead, cotton, copper and other basic materials so necessary to our industry," Mr. Westcott concluded, "are so scarce that supply is irregular and unpredictable. However, every possible avenue has been explored to provide and improve telephone service. We are happy to say that Palos Park will have in a short time, more and better telephone service in spite of serious material shortages. As more telephone service becomes available, applicants who have waited the longest will be notified by the Company that their telephone will be installed."

TO KEEP YOUR ENGINE HEALTHY

Change FILTER ELEMENTS Regularly

Diagrammatic sketch showing filtering operation

The oil filter on your McCormick-Deering tractor protects the engine against wear caused by dirty oil. But unless the filter element is periodically replaced its purpose is defeated and no protection results. For your engine's sake... and the sake of your tractor investment... be sure to renew the filter element each time you change oil. Remember, the new-style "umbrella" element keeps oil clean and your engine protected for 120 hours of hard use (100 hours for Diesel engines). Take home a supply of these protective elements the next time you are in town.

HOW THE "UMBRELLA" FILTER ELEMENT WORKS

The element is made of two large sheets of special creped, impregnated cellulose—accordion-folded to form a double-walled cylinder. Oil from the crankcase is pumped under pressure into the filter housing where it completely envelopes the element. The oil is forced through tiny pores in the element and all sludge and dirt is retained on the outer surfaces. The clean oil passes down between the two sheets and goes back to the crankcase.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Sept. 1, was:

"CHRIST JESUS"

The Golden Text was:

"The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son: that all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father" (John 6: 22, 23).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS" (Jer. 23: 5, 6).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Christ is the true idea voicing good, the divine message from God to men speaking to the human consciousness. The Christ is incorporeal, spiritual,—yea, the divine image and likeness, dispelling the illusions of the senses; the Way, the Truth, and the Life, healing the sick and casting out evils, destroying sin, disease and death... Abraham, Jacob, Moses, and the prophets caught glorious glimpses of the Messiah, or Christ, which baptized these seers in the divine nature, the essence of Love" (pp. 332, 333).

STANDARD OF LIVING RISES IN U. S. . . . This photo-diagram shows how the average income of American families has risen and how the incomes have been more equally distributed since the semi-depression year of 1936 to the postwar year of 1945. The figures show that millions of families have joined the middle income group, although 70 per cent still fall below the $3,000-a-year mark. In the lowest brackets the total has dropped nine million families.

TWO AMERICANS IN FRANCE . . . Seeking the peace and quiet of the French countryside on a Sunday, away from the heated peace conference at the Luxembourg palace in Paris, U. S. Pasture Improved By Proper System

Fertilizer Addition Produces Good Stand

A pasture improvement system that has enabled farmers following it to increase their grass production 78 per cent through applications of nitrogen in the fall and 80 per cent through spring treatments, was recommended by Prof. D. R. Dodd, extension agronomist of Ohio State university. Professor Dodd measured the results in numerous tests on Ohio farms of nitrogen applications in the fall of 1944 and the spring of 1945 and his findings were based on these tests.

The nitrogen fertilizer was applied on pastures in the form of ammonium nitrate at an average rate of 123 pounds per acre in the fall and 115 pounds in the spring.

Professor Dodd reported that the effect of the plant food on the growth of the grass was more pronounced in fields where legumes made up less than 50 per cent of the stand of grass. But even with a high per cent of clover the increase was 68 per cent. In the various tests studied, 37 farmers who applied an average of 133 pounds of ammonium nitrate on meadows got an average increase of 1,700 pounds of hay per acre.

Better cows will result from better grazing conditions.

The fall applications made a difference of 1,500 pounds of hay per acre, and spring applications increased yields on an average of 1,790 pounds of hay per acre.

While the average date of fall application of Ohio was October 22, and the nitrogen was placed on the fields in spring as early as possible, Mr. Dodd said the season of applications is not as important as is the farmer's decision to apply the nitrogen one time or another, because profitable dividend is assured from either application.

Know Your Breed

Ayrshires

By W. J. DRYDEN

Strathglass Lucky Puff, national champion long distance Ayrshire butterfat producer—189,843 pounds milk, 4 per cent, 7,598 pounds fat in 5,235 days.

Originating in southwestern Scotland the latter part of the 18th century, Ayrshires were first imported into the United States in 1822.

Ayrshire milk contains about 4 per cent butterfat. A lifetime record of 189,843 pounds of milk has been made.

Ayrshires are well built with stocky body. Mature cows average about 1,050 pounds. A national organization was formed in 1875 to devote and preserve the records and the breed.

Use Vapor to Kill Plant Pests Indoors

The use of azobenzene to control red spider mite on roses and many other plants and flowers in greenhouse and other buildings has been discovered by Cornell university specialists. The substance should be brushed on steam pipes like ordinary paint. As the pipes heat, the azobenzene melts and diffuses as a vapor which goes to work on the bugs quickly and effectively. Constantly syringing of plants is not needed.

THERE seems to be a wide divergence of opinion as to whether the rabid fanatic is entitled to boo a good ball player on an off day and feed him the Old Bronx Cheer in his time of trouble. As you may know, there are two sides to every argument, the same as a plank. Usually both are just as wooden, leading nowhere, but in this case the argument at hand is a big part of baseball.

Booing a visiting or hostile player is another matter. This is often a tribute to the damage said player has slipped to the home club.

The argument we are taking up here concerns the ethical side in riding the home athlete when he is in the process of cavorting on the soapy chute, otherwise known as a slump.

The fan's argument is that as long as he pays his entrance fee and the game is offering him no particular thrill for the money invested, he has a perfect right to pick up his enjoyment and entertainment over another route, which is letting the erring or futile ball player know just what the fan thinks about him.

The fan has a good case here as long as he doesn't move into personal invective, involving the player's ancestry and his present family, which often happens. The only half-way shock I ever picked up over a booing incident occurred many years ago when Pittsburgh fans started riding Honus Wagner.

Wagner was then in his 41st year. He had been an outstanding star for over 20 seasons. He had given millions as many thrills as any ball player had ever displayed up to the reign of Babe Ruth, the all-time thrill king. His brilliant work at short with his bushel-basket hands, his great base running, his tremendous hitting through two decades seemed to be quite enough to allow for a few lapses in his fading days.

Home and Visiting Boos

But the theme song of the baseball crowd is: "It isn't what you used to be — it's what you are today." Just what the Flying Dutchman thought of the vocal raspberries thrown his way no one ever will know. But I've figured ever since that if a home crowd could boo Wagner, no one else should be immune.

Ball players tell me they have no feeling about being booed in hostile hamlets. I know John McGraw relished the dislike he deliberately built up in Chicago, St. Louis and other cities away from New York. I've heard Matty booed in New York — but not McGraw, although he may have been.

The swiftest and most effective reaction to booing from a rival crowd came from Cobb years ago. Ray Chapman, Cleveland shortstop, had just been killed by Carl Mays in a Yankee game. Cobb had been quoted in an interview denouncing Mays. Cobb denied the interview with considerable fervor.

The next day, appearing with the Tigers against the Yankees, Ty took a terrific vocal lathering from some 35,000 Yankee fans. "It's no fun," Cobb told me that night, "to be booed, hissed and cursed by 35,000 American citizens."

But in place of curling up or growing sour, Cobb stepped out that day and got four hits, stole two or three bases, scored several runs and broke up the ball game. The answer is that the big crowd was cheering him in his last time up.

Showing Up the Mob

This seems to be the best answer. The best reply to a boo or a vocal cataclysm of hate and derision is to show up the maudlin mob of goat-getters. You rarely hear them booing a fellow who is making good. No ball player ever took the terrific vocal riding Babe Ruth absorbed in the Yankee-Cub world series years ago when he came to bat against Jack Root in Chicago. Packed stands howled and yelled and called Babe names they wouldn't print in the press of purgatory. The Babe applied even viler epithets, one against 45,000, as he pointed to the center field flag pole. That was the most famous home run Babe ever hit in his collection of more than 700.

"All I know about it," the Babe told me later, "is that ball was kinder egg-shaped or flattened out after they found it."

Problem of 1947

We have been talking recently with a number of managers not club owners or ball players, about the 1947 baseball season. One of the smartest told me this—with the amazing increase in attendance, with the aftermath of the Mexican league and the union arrival, ball players for 1947 are going to demand big pay increases.

"A good many of these deserve such increases," the manager said.

It Seems Bathing Wasn't So Popular in Early Days

Through the years personal hygiene has come a long way. Especially from the days when Peter, the Hermit, thanked God that water had not touched his body for more than forty years, and Queen Isabella of Spain boasted of having taken only two baths in her entire lifetime.

In 1842 in Massachusetts, anyone who wished to bathe more than once a week had to have a doctor's certificate certifying he needed it and could stand it.

Philadelphia once had a law, in force for many years, forbidding bathing of any sort between November 1 and March 15.

Household Hints

Wear can be distributed on large and small-sized rugs by turning them around from time to time.

Laces can be stiffened by rinsing them in a solution composed of one teaspoon of borax and a quart of water.

Revive old fiber porch rugs with a coat of canvas paint. Leave rug on floor to paint it but put papers underneath to protect floor.

Cutting one-fourth-inch notches in the edges of bacon or smoked ham with the scissors will keep it from curling when cooking.

Run a short curtain rod through the top of the shoe bag to prevent it from sagging. This holds the bag in place more securely and the shoes remain in order.

Does your mixing bowl move away from you under the beating and stirring you do? Set it on a damp cloth and it will remain steady. A tea towel works fine for this.

Go over your scuffed white shoes with the beaten white of an egg. This pastes the broken pieces down and fills the spaces with a transparent filler that can scarcely be noticed.

For faster defrosting of your refrigerator, remove the ice cube trays, fill them with boiling water and put them back in place. The current should be off. For the average refrigerator one filling of boiling water left in the trays for 10 minutes should complete defrosting.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

The crew of a small sailing vessel in the Caribbean pick up Dick Tancu, adrift on a raft. Dick realizes that he is among men who are virtually pirates. They come upon a drifting schooner, with only two people aboard, the demented captain and his daughter, Rose. Tancu, the pirate captain, captures the ship and ties up Rose and Dick, who has tried to help her. Then Tancu and his crew search the ship for treasure. Tancu gives up, as a storm is brewing. He takes Dick back to his ship, but Dick slips away and returns to the schooner. He arrives just in time to rescue Rose from two pirates. They rig up a sea anchor.

CHAPTER VIII

When morning dawned they crept on deck, wan, pale and exhausted, but happy. A quick glance around the horizon revealed the presence of no ship. The lugger had disappeared, either driven away by the storm or safe in some harbor to which she had scooted at the eleventh hour. With the same anxious thought in their minds, they turned to each other.

"I hope she went down in the storm," murmured Rose, smiling wickledly.

"No such luck, I'm afraid. Trust old Tancu to save his skin. But if he doesn't return I won't kick."

"He will," replied Rose with conviction. "He'll come back to seize the schooner."

"Then we must get away. How long?"—glancing at the top of the forward mast—"would it take to rig up a sail?"

She smiled and shook her head. "We couldn't do it in a month just by ourselves."

"Then we must drift and drift until somebody picks us up?"

She frowned and looked thoughtful. "If you were a sailor," she began, "and knew—"

"I can learn," he interrupted. "Tell me what to do."

She surveyed the wreckage aloft with critical eyes. "If we could get up a jib," she mused, "just enough canvas to steer by, we might lay our course for land, if we knew which way it was."

"We'll lay it any way, even if it takes us to Europe. It's better than drifting."

Rose was quiet, staring across the heaving surface of the ocean. "What is it?" he inquired, advancing to her side. "What do you see?"

"I don't know," she replied slowly. "It looks like a cloud on the horizon—or—"

"—land?" he interrupted eagerly. "It might be. I don't know. Things are so deceptive at sea."

"Where're your sea-glasses?"

"Ask Tancu. The last I saw of them he had them."

"Damn Tancu and his tribe!" muttered Dick impulsively.

They continued to gaze in the direction of the object faintly outlined above the horizon.

"We'll believe it's land," he said finally, "and when we get a sail rigged up we'll steer for it."

"If Father was only in his right mind," she murmured, "he could tell whether it was land or—"

"How is he now?" asked Dick, when she paused.

"He slept peacefully all night. I shouldn't wonder if he recovered, and was better than ever. It may be that blow on his head will—will—"

"I hope so," she smiled, following her train of thought, "but we'd better not put too much trust in miracles. If he recovers his senses, it will be a miracle, won't it? Perhaps then," he added, his eyes twinkling, "he can tell us where he hid that treasure."

Treasure Really Exists, Rose Tells Dick

She turned slowly toward him. "You don't believe there was any treasure?" she asked seriously.

He laughed pleasantly. "Do you?"

"Yes," she admitted after a long pause. "It's real, and it's aboard the Betty."

Dick was too surprised to speak for a time, and stared with incredulous eyes at her. He drew a deep breath finally, and said:

"Then your father's babbling wasn't all moonshine? He knew where it was hidden, but was sane enough not to show Tancu?"

"No," slowly, "he didn't know where it was. I hid it when he lost his mind. I thought it would be safer."

Dick stared in dumb admiration. "And you bluffed Tancu? Made him believe no one knew where it was except your father? I never dreamed you knew. You deceived me, too."

"I never said I didn't know where it was," she added, "neither to you nor to Tancu."

"No, that's a fact, you didn't."

They stood by the port rail, watching the sunlight dancing on the waves. Dick glanced down at the head so close to his, and felt once more the passion of love surging up within him. He turned away abruptly, but she put out a small hand to detain him.

"Don't you want to know where it is, and what it is?" she asked in an injured voice.

"Why—if you want to tell me," he stammered. "But, why should you? It's not mine. I have nothing to do with it."

"Yes, it belongs partly to you," she replied quickly. "You helped save it, and if we reach land you must have your share."

He shook his head slowly. "I could never do that. It would be like accepting payment for—doing your duty. You saved my life when that ugly Carib fought me. You knew I couldn't overcome him. I was too far spent. He'd have killed me in the end, if you hadn't shot him."

"And then killed me—or worse," she murmured, shuddering. "Wasn't I protecting myself in shooting him?"

"I suppose so, but—"

When he stopped she looked at him with twinkling eyes, full of amusement. "Haven't you any curiosity?" she asked finally. "Don't you want to know what the treasure is, and how we got it? Or are you afraid that will look like accepting payment?"

He broke in with a laugh. "I'm dying with curiosity. What is this treasure, and where'd you get it?"

She did not immediately answer, but kept him waiting, smiling provocatively into his face. "It's a rather long story," she began finally, "we found it on a wrecked submarine."

"She was an outlaw," Rose went on, "and she'd been robbing her victims before sending them to the bottom. There was enough prize money aboard to make all the crew

"Nothing but the top of the conning tower was visible when we discovered her."

satisfied—stolen money, you know. They were pirates, this crew were, for there was the evidence. There were rings and jewels, too. We searched for the submarine's papers, thinking perhaps we might find a clue to the ships from which the loot was taken, so that it could be restored to the owners. But the log couldn't be found, and there was nothing to identify the ships that had been sunk. Father wanted to bring everything of value away, but I couldn't do it. I wouldn't let him touch the blood-stained ones. We left them there with the skeletons of the robbers. Maybe others will find them some day. I don't want them. I never want to see the island again!"

Disasters Followed Finding of Treasure

"Did the crew know about the submarine and the treasure?" Dick asked, approaching her side.

"No, Father and I kept it to ourselves. We brought the money and gold and other things aboard in a basket, and hid them in the cabin. No one suspected we'd found anything but fresh gulls' eggs. We made five trips, and always brought eggs back with us. When we sailed away we had enough treasure aboard to make us rich—rich enough to buy another schooner and a home ashore."

She smiled at him, as if to indicate that her idea of riches was moderate, and not of the inordinate, greedy variety.

"We could have had more," she added, "if we'd taken the diamonds and rings that—that! But I couldn't touch them!" she broke off passionately. "They were stained with blood, or at least I thought so. Father laughed at me, and said it was the salt that had tarnished them; but it made no difference. I couldn't touch them!"

She drew a deep sigh, and remained silent to regain her composure. "That's why I told you," she said then, laughing gently, "that it was tainted money—blood money—and I wasn't sure I dared touch any of it. Would you?"

"Blood money put to proper use is no crime," he replied simply. "You're entitled to it. You're not superstitious?"

"No—but ever since we had the money aboard disaster has followed us. First, there was the storm that wrecked the schooner; then Father's accident, and then the desertion of the crew. Next Tancu and his pirates came, and—"

"I followed next!"

"That's the only pleasant thing that's happened since we found the treasure," she replied, frankly looking him in the eyes. "Without you aboard, I think—I'd have thrown that treasure overboard long before this, or given it to Tancu. I'm not sure but that would have been the best way out of it."

"No, it would have been put to base uses if old Tancu got it," replied Dick. "He mustn't lay hands on it. I'm glad you deceived him. We'll get the treasure ashore, and your father can buy a new schooner with it. He'll need one after this. The Betty's pretty well battered up."

"She's insured," Rose interrupted, "so we'll not need the money for that."

"Your father will need it," Dick replied. "He's made his last trip if—if he doesn't recover his mind."

An expression of pain swept across her face; then a little fiercely, with hands clenched, she said: "But he will recover. I feel it! I shan't lose hope—not if we can reach land."

"With money to pay a good doctor he'll recover," Dick replied, smiling encouragingly. "That's where your treasure will prove a blessing. It can't hoodoo you any more."

"Are you sure of that?" she interrupted, pointing to the speck on the horizon. "Isn't that the lugger again?"

Dick gave a violent start and followed her hand. The object in the distance was still too vague of outline to determine its character, but either through imagination or distorted optical illusion they thought it to be the San Miguel returning to finish the work Captain Tancu had planned.

"Isn't it?" Rose repeated after a long pause.

"I don't know," Dick murmured. "It looks so, but we may be mistaken. If it is—"

"—we'll take a raft and leave the schooner," she finished for him. "I'll never stay aboard if Tancu comes."

"What good will that do?" He'll overtake us on the raft. We couldn't escape."

The truth of this, borne in upon her mind, made her silent and thoughtful. After a while her face brightened. "We may buy Tancu off," she said eagerly. "He'll let us go if we give him that treasure. That's all he wants."

"That and the mythical jewels from the steamer," smiled Dick.

She watched him anxiously, and then sighed. "I see," she murmured, "one wouldn't be sufficient. He'd want both."

"Tancu's greedy."

"And you couldn't find the jewels?"

"They never existed."

"Then we'll keep the treasure. Tancu'll never find it. I'll die before I tell him."

Dick frowned. "Perhaps you'd better buy your freedom with it. He'll do that much for the treasure."

"And hold you a prisoner until—"

"Never mind that. I can outwit Tancu. I did it once, and I'll do it again. You make him promise he'll put you ashore, and—"

"Dick," she interrupted, "don't talk nonsense. If it isn't enough to buy life for both of us, it isn't enough for one. We go ashore together, or we stay here until the end."

The blur in the distance they had taken, rightly or wrongly, for the lugger remained stationary, or at least so fixed a point on the horizon that it neither grew larger nor faded entirely away. At times a mist swept between it and the schooner and temporarily blotted it out, but it returned later, and always it appeared a little closer, but not much clearer in outline.

Something Appears On the Horizon

They watched it with puzzled eyes, thankful that it did not approach, but disappointed that it did not vanish entirely. "If it's the lugger," Dick remarked once, "she's been crippled by the storm, and is drifting before the wind."

"Then we have an equal chance to get away," replied Rose eagerly. "If she's no better off than we are."

"Captain Tancu has a crew to help him patch up his sails and rigging," he interrupted, smiling. "We couldn't beat him at that."

"I don't believe it's the lugger after all," she said irreverently, shading her eyes. "It looks to me more like—like—"

"—land?" he asked.

"Yes, but not the mainland—an island."

"Not your island where the submarine was wrecked?"

"No," shuddering. "At least I hope not."

"If it's an island, we ought to try to get to it. We'll start rigging up that jib. The wind's freshening, and it's blowing in the right direction."

"Yes, we're drifting toward it. That's why we see it more distinctly. If it was the lugger it would drift as fast as we do."

"That's right. It is nearer, and it must be land."

They glanced into each other's eyes, hope dawning in them for the first time since the storm, giving a radiant expression to their features that was contagious. Dick spoke first. "It's land, Rose, and we'll reach it before Tancu can come back and find us. I told you that treasure was no longer a hoodoo. It's going to bring us good luck."

JESUS AND SINCERITY OF SPEECH

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:16; Proverbs 26:23-28; Matt. 26:69-75.
MEMORY SELECTION—Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbor.—Ephesians 4:25.

God is truth, and therefore any kind of lie is evidence of godlessness. Satan is the father of lies (John 8:44) and the father of all liars.

I. The Prohibition of Lying (Exod. 20:16).

This "thou shalt not" of God has to do primarily with perjury; that is, the telling of an untruth in court.

This is one of the worst forms of lying, because it may result in the one against whom it is practiced losing his liberty, his life or his property, or the destruction of his good reputation.

It is obvious, however, that the commandment covers all forms of lying, whether in business, in social contacts, in the home, or in the church. We might do well to consider what the Bible has to say about whisperers, talebearers, backbiters and others (see Lev. 19:16; II Cor. 12:20).

II. The Purpose of Lying (Prov. 26:23-26).

Sometimes as one hears the continuous stream of lies which flow from the lips of some men, one is apt to feel that it is just a bad habit of careless talking which has become a part of the life.

There is, however, a real purpose behind the lies of men, and that is to deceive in order to get gain or advantage, or to cover up hatred.

How much of all this there is in the world today—yes, and in the church. Those who profess to be the followers of Christ use the devices of the devil in their relations with fellow members of the church. Christian workers who wish to appear greater than they are, or to look greater than others, use deceit and lying. With what results?

III. The Punishment of Lying (Prov. 26:28; Matt. 26:75).

One lie leads to, in fact calls for, another, and soon the liar has dug a pit so big that he stumbles and falls into it. He is like one who starts a great stone rolling, and lo, it rolls back on him and crushes him. Yes, in due time he is shown up before the entire congregation (v. 26).

Then, too, the lie does harm to others. No matter what its nature—a half truth, or a truth used to deceive, or an outright falsehood—it bears awful fruit in the life of the one toward whom it is directed, or whose name is involved (v. 28). Once started, it is often impossible to stop. One cannot ever catch up with a lie.

But there is also a horrible and bitter fruitage of lies in the life and the heart of the liar. Lies do "come home to roost," and they make the heart and life of anyone who has a vestige of decency and honor left, miserably unhappy. Consider Peter (Matt. 26:75).

It is of the utmost importance that we stress before children and young people the awful results of lying, as well as its sinfulness. Lying and deceit are so commonly accepted in our day that many regard it as all right—if you don't get caught. But the fact is, you always do get caught by God—yes, and by your own lie.

IV. The Practice of Lying (Matt. 26:69-74).

Sadly enough, the constant lying of the world seems to have infected the minds and hearts of Christians. Instead of being cleansed from this worldly defilement they carry its awful tendencies into the church.

The great lie within the church, and one of Satan's prize exhibits, is the falsehood of modern religious liberalism (so-called), which is essentially a denial of real New Testament Christianity. Jesus said (v. 42) that if God is our Father we will accept him as the Christ. The one who speaks sweet words about the example, the manhood, the leadership of the Master, and who denies him his place as God, is clearly in mind here as the follower of the father of lies.

Someone has suggested that the great spiritual problem of our day is not the conflict between the church and the world; nor is it to determine how the church can best serve in the world, but rather what to do about the world which has gotten into the church. How did worldliness get into the church? The members brought it there after they had gone out and warmed themselves at the world's fire, and fellowshiped with the world in ungodly living.

The denials made by Peter seem almost unbelievable in the life of one who had been in immediate fellowship with the Lord and who had seen his glory. We have here a revelation of the fact that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?" (Jer. 17:9).

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

A scene from "Blonde Alibi," mystery and murder thriller, starring Tom Neal, Martha O'Driscoll, Donald MacBride and Peter Whitney.

Those lunaticish Marx Brothers are loose again in "A Night in Casablanca," with Charles Drake and Lois Collier. This zany howl raiser of the season will open at the Roxy Theatre Sunday for three days.

The story has a post war setting in colorful Casablanca, with a swank hotel as the center of action. Groucho, the man with a setting walk, is in charge of the hotel.

He is assisted by his two completely wacky brothers, Harpo and Chico. The plot is centered about a ruthless mob of Nazis masquerading as Dutch aristocrats who have smuggled the hidden European art treasures and jewels into the hotel before they are shipped to a South American cache. How the marks of the Nazis are put on the Nazis is most amusingly contrived and will cause the audience great difficulties in remaining out of the aisles.

"A Night in Paradise," with Merle Oberon and Turhan Bey, will be featured at the Roxy theatre next Wednesday and Thursday.

Freezing Water

If two equal quantities of water, cold and hot, are placed under identical natural freezing conditions, cold water will freeze first because a certain amount of time is required to remove the heat from the hot water. To a limited extent it is true, however, that water which first has been heated will freeze more rapidly than unheated water because of the difference in density and the amount of dissolved air.

THE SMOKE of battle has cleared in the past year, but not that of American industry—nor of the atomic bomb. The stacks of factories (right) are pouring forth their cumulus of spent energy as the productivity of American genius is transformed from the uses of war to the ways of peace. And out over the distant tropical atoll of Bikini the atomic cloud (left) has risen, as much a promise of civilization's physical reconstruction as a threat of its future annihilation.

THE FLAT TOP of "Fighting Lady" is a safer place today for the wandering sailor than it was a year ago. On the flight decks of many of the carriers that brought America's naval air might to the very soil of Japan itself, the visitor, like the Navyman (below), can walk without fear of thundering propellers or the spotting of squadrons ready to roar out over the sea to drop lethal loads on enemy targets. This V-J Day finds thousands of "the birds with folded wings" voiceless and at rest and their mother hens secured snugly to their piers, but ready for almost instant action should the unwanted time for their services come again.

THE OFFICE of Price Administration died officially on June 30, 1946. Before it had been inoperative ten days, everybody whose life and work were affected by it knew the nation had sustained no serious loss. Calamities that were supposed to fall upon the consumers of America did not happen. Some prices rose a little; others fell. The law of supply and demand was still working.
It had not been on vacation.

In the building industries, among real estate and lumber people, timid home seekers had predicted the wildest of run-away prices because of the unprecedented housing demand. Everything necessary to make prices sky-rocket was present, but the crepe-hangers were disappointed.
Industrial leaders went into hud-dles and resolved for moderation, regardless of pressure from eager buyers.

Returned THE DEAD bureau to life was resurrected on July 25 by political pressure. One powerful factor was the influence of thousands of bureaucrats whose easy jobs were all but lost. Lame and weakened by legislative modifications, the Ora lives and has certain functions. But those 25 inactive days proved something: The longer we lived without the Ora the more useless it appeared.

Increasing production may be depended upon to hold most prices down. Some will advance in spite of anything the Ora can do. While natural laws control, and industrial leaders "hold the price line," channels of trade are filling up steadily with new production and growing stocks hold prices down. Meat is only an example. Livestock hurries to market. Steaks and chops are on the menu again.

Exceptions PROBABLY the inevitable human race will never be free from opportunists ready to profiteer when there are no restraints and crafty enough to run black-markets when restrictions are in force. Maybe there actually was an unhappy couple in California on July 2, whose sandwiches advanced in price from 15¢ to 40¢ while they were being toasted.
Anyway it was a good story.

We, the American people, are heirs of a dearly bought liberty.
We have an opportunity to prove that we are worthy to inherit it.
We can do this by a fair approach to every price problem. Whether we are manufacturers, marketers, or consumers, we have a part to play. We do not need anyone to take the role of dictator. Truly no price was ever fixed successfully by statutory law.

Consumers themselves can keep prices right by shunning racketeers who play their customers for suckers and by pacifying merchants who appreciate their confidence. We should be slow to retaliate against price rises that are needful. If workers, especially, will let growing production adjust prices before calling for higher wages, it will go far toward hastening recovery.
